History

Carth was assigned to the cruiser Ender Spire during the Jedi Civil War when it was ambushed by a Sith fleet over the planet Taris. Taking an escape pod to the planet surface with the memory-wiped Revan (who was given a new name and a fake biography of a simple Republic soldier), the two searched for and eventually found the Jedi Bastila Shan on the surface. The three escaped Taris on a stolen ship, the Ebon Hawk, just as Darth Malak obliterated the city with a planetary bombardment. After escaping to the Jedi Academy on Dantooine, he was sent along with Bastila and Revan to find the Star Maps and the Star Forge. Upon investigation, Revan found that Carth's homeworld of Telos was destroyed by the Sith under the guidance of Admiral Saul Karath, his former mentor. His wife was killed in the attack and his son, Dustil, went missing. Revan and Carth later found Dustil as a Sith recruit in the Sith Academy on Korriban. The destruction of his planet led to a significant amount of guilt for Carth, who had and didn't use the opportunity to stop Saul and vowed to kill him. Furthermore, Saul's betrayal and the betrayal of the men who became Sith have caused him to have trouble trusting anyone, almost to the point of paranoia.

While looking for the Star Maps, Carth and his companions were captured by Admiral Karath and taken aboard his ship, the Leviathan. After breaking out, Bastila, Carth, and Revan managed to make it to the bridge of the ship, where Carth killed Saul. As he was dying, Saul revealed the true identity of Carth and Bastila's companion - that of the former Dark Lord Revan. Carth felt betrayed, though he was later able to accept that Revan was no longer the Sith Lord and had become a true servant of the light.

After the destruction of the Star Forge and the end of the Jedi Civil War, Carth was promoted to Admiral. When Revan left to search for the true Sith Empire beyond the rim, he charged Carth with the task of protecting the Republic until his return, an order Carth dedicated himself to following. When the Sith Lord Darth Nihilus attacked Telos five years after the end of the Jedi Civil War, Carth led the Republic fleet defending the planet and Citadel Station above.
